Reimburse cost of PPE kits: Ombudsman

CONSUMER PROTECTION
JEHANGIR B GAI

In recent times, hospitals have been flooded with patients. The cost of treatment has soared due to the need to use expensive medication and the need for the medical and para-medical staff to change their personal protective equipment (PPE) multiple times. Insurance companies attempt to reduce their financial burden by disallowing the reimbursement of certain items such as PPE kits and bio-medical waste. In a significant ruling, the insurance ombudsman has granted relief by asserting that these expenses have to be reimbursed by the insurer.

Jayaben Shah and her husband Ramniklal were insured under Jio's group medical insurance policy issued by Universal Sompo General Insurance Co. They were covered for an amount of ₹10 lakh for the period April 1, 2020 to March 31, 2021.

During the tenure of the policy, both Jayaben and her husband suffered from Covid 19. She was admitted to Harilal Jaichand Doshi GHS Hospital from October 1, 2020 to October 11, 2020. The cost of treatment came to ₹1,51,239. When a claim was lodged, the insurer merely paid ₹74,393, disallowing the remaining amount of ₹76,846.

Similarly, her husband Ramniklal also suffered from Covid 19, for which he was admitted to the same hospital from September 25, 2020 to October 7, 2020. The cost of treatment came to ₹1,54,262. When a claim was lodged, the insurer merely paid ₹89,355, disallowing the remaining amount of ₹64,907.

When questioned about the reason for not making full payment, the insurer clarified that the deductions were for proportionate deduction, certain non-payable items, and co-pay. Feeling aggrieved, Manish Shah, the son of Jayantiben and Ramniklal, filed a complaint before the insurance ombudsman for Mumbai and Goa.

After the complaint was lodged, the insurer agreed to reimburse the component deducted towards co-pay, that is, ₹18,879 in the case of Jayaben Shah and ₹26,170 in the case of Ramniklal Shah.

The insurance ombudsman sought clarification about the other deductions. The company clarified that the policy provided for capping of ₹4,000 per day on room rent, so the charges billed in excess of ₹4,000 would not be payable. The insurer also stated that ₹5,500 towards bio-medical waste and ₹10,200 for PPE kits were not payable.

Milind Kharat, the insurance ombudsman, in his order dated April 30, 2021, observed that the extra amount being billed for PPE kits was due to the pandemic. The patient neither had control nor was responsible for this increase in cost. Hence the ombudsman concluded that the insured could not be faulted for the additional charges levied for the use of PPE kits, and held that the amount billed by the hospital would have to be reimbursed by the insurer.

The ombudsman concluded the insured could not be faulted for the charges levied for PPE kits, and the insurer would have to reimburse this amount

Similarly, the amount deducted for bio-medical waste would also have to be reimbursed. However, the other deductions were held to be in order.

Accordingly, in the case of Jayaben Shah's claim, the ombudsman directed the insurer to reimburse ₹10,200 for PPE kits, ₹5,500 for bio-medical waste, and ₹18,879 wrongly deducted towards co-pay. Similarly, in the case of Ramniklal Shah's claim, the ombudsman ordered the insurer to reimburse ₹7,800 for PPE kits, ₹6,500 for bio-medical waste, and ₹26,170 wrongly deducted towards co-pay. A period of 30 days was given for the insurer to comply with the order.

New tenancy law does a fine balancing act

It will spur owners to rent out their properties; tenants will enjoy more choices

SANJAY KUMAR SINGH

The Model Tenancy Act received the approval of the Union Cabinet last week. Once states and union territories implement it, the rental housing market will get a regulator at par with the Real Estate Regulatory Authority (RERA) for the sale-purchase market. The Act aims to ensure that landlords and tenants across the country play by a standard set of equitable rules.

Greater security for landlords

In India, owners of residential properties are reluctant to rent them because the rental yield is low — just 1-2 per cent. Landlords also fear that tenants may not vacate their houses. "Once the Model Tenancy Act is in place, it will give landlords the security to rent out their houses," says Anshuman Magazine, chairman and chief executive officer (CEO), India, South-East Asia, Middle East & Africa, CBRE.

Nowadays, however, landlords have to pay a high monthly maintenance charge in many new apartment complexes. "The Act will enable landlords to transform a non-performing asset into a performing asset," says Magazine.

Its punitive provisions will make it harder for tenants to refuse to vacate. "Landlords can now claim double compensation from their tenant if the latter refuses to hand over the property at the end of the agreed rental period," says Anuj Puri, chairman, ANAROCK Property Consultants. If they don't vacate even after two months, the compensation can rise to four times.

The Model Act defines the procedure for evicting a tenant clearly. "Currently, no standard mechanism exists for landlords to evict unruly or defaulting tenants. The setting up of a Rent Court will also speed up the eviction process," says Altaf Ahmad, chief business officer, rental business, Square Yards.

On the flip side, landlords in many cities may not like the cap on security deposits to two months' rent. The deposit is not just a safeguard against risks like non-payment of rent or dam-

THE RULES OF ENGAGEMENT

- Both landlords and tenants must insist on a rent agreement signed by both the parties
- Without it, getting redress from the Rent Authority will not be possible
- Read the rent agreement before signing on the dotted line to avoid unpleasant surprises later

- Landlords should verify tenant's background
- This would include getting records of civilian and criminal courts, and address and identity proof checked (many agencies do this)
- Tenants should pay rent via digital mode to create a payment trail age to the property. It also provides a kicker to the landlord's returns. Some experts feel such aspects should have been left to market forces as setting a low cap could disincentivise landlords from renting.

More options for tenants

This Act is expected to benefit tenants by increasing housing supply. Tenants will then have more choices. This could also temper the pace of increase in rental rates. "People who currently live in unorganised colonies will be able to live in better areas," says Magazine.

In case of disputes, the landlord is forbidden from cutting off essential supplies (like water and electricity). The Act also makes it incumbent on landlords to carry out essential repairs.

Tenants will also benefit from the capping of the security deposit to two months of rent. "This will especially benefit students, and young professionals who tend to have limited resources at the start of their careers," says Puri.

The Act also provides clear guidelines on refund of security deposit. "It says the landlord must return the security deposit on the very day possession of the property is handed back," says Ahmad.

If a dispute arises, the tenant now has the option to stop paying rent to the landlord. He can instead deposit it with the Rent Authority. Once the dispute is resolved, the Authority can transfer the money to the landlord. Thus, while the tenant will retain bargaining power in a dispute, he will avoid the charge of defaulting on rent.

The provision that adequate notice must be given for rent increase will also provide relief to tenants. "They will have the time to decide whether to continue in the same house or hunt for a new one," says Saurabh Garg, co-founder and chief business officer, NoBroker.com.

Rental housing gets a regulator

The Model Tenancy Act has a provision for setting up a Rent Authority. It will play the role of an adjudicating authority. Landlords and tenants will have to register their rental agreements with the Authority and get a unique ID number. The Authority will ensure that standard terms and conditions are adhered to in the agreement. The agreement will be published on its website. By checking these documents, people will be able to tell whether a property is already occupied.

"Renting will become a more formal and organised activity," says Subhankar Mitra, managing director, advisory services, Colliers India.

The Authority will have the power to act as a dispute resolution mechanism between the landlord and the tenant. "It will be able to step in and give a clear and quick decision in certain types of disputes," says Mitra.

Court for rental disputes

If someone is not satisfied with the Rent Authority's verdict, he will have the option to approach the Rent Court. "In case of major disputes, like eviction, people will have to go to the Rent Court," says Harsh Parikh, partner, Khaitan & Company. If the Rent Court passes an order that either party is not happy with, it can approach the Rent Tribunal within 30 days of passing of the order. "The Rent Tribunal must dispose of the order within 60 days unless there is just cause for taking more time," adds Parikh.

A few lacunae

The Act will not apply retrospectively. "People who have entered into longer lease agreements will not get its benefit until their current ones expire," says Garg.

The Act only covers lease agreements, and not leave and licence agreements. "Leave and licence is the predominant form of agreement that people enter into in metros like Mumbai," says Parikh. He also adds that having two layers of redress — Rent Court and Rent Tribunal — was uncalculated as one layer would have sufficed.
